Case Closed

Final Comments: I am now 980km from home, I've incurred costs of hundreds of dollars in coming to pickup the vehicle only to discover that it is torn apart.

I need advice from eBay ASAP on how to proceed, and how to retrieve the $4000 I have paid the seller so far.

Do I stay in NSW, losing income & incurring more costs for accomodation etc, or do I head home again & get eBays help to recover my money?

So disappointed, this was supposed to be a positive thing, something to pick me up...

If you read the sellers previous post it would appear as though it was a premeditated plan to claim the car was stripped whilst it was outside of his business premises... Only the situation was discovered before ge could complete the plan.

Please advise if there is an email address or SMS no I can forward the SMS history with the seller.

Drove 11 hours, arrived in Fairfield only to discover what the seller has been hiding; the car has been torn apart. Advertised specifically as a "PROFESSIONALLY BUILT RACE CAR", and having proven that he is deceitful and dishonest I am not willing to complete the transaction.

I was thankful that a police constable mediated a telephone conversation, During which the seller stated that he was unwilling/unable to refund the $4000 I have already paid.

Trying to put myself in your shoes, but can't for the life of me understand your opinion...

FYI:

I'm a mild mannered IT guy, I'm coming up alone, I just want to pickup my car & get this finalized.

Thankyou, eBay are a lot more likely to see my side of the problem while you are being ridiculous.

You

don't want to handle $1000 cash, but you want to park my racecar in the street? Be realistic for a minute and stop escalating the situation. Mon-Fri during business hours was your stipulation.

Not going to have coverage on the Hume, but will check again for your address when I reach NSW, if you haven't supplied the actual address I'll pop around and visit you in Shamrock Street.

Please post the pickup address and all further correspondence in this secure forum so that eBay can see that this is progressing.

As already stated your final $1000 has already been withdrawn from the bank and is in the form of cash; I will complete the transaction in person. I will be there to pickup the vehicle in person, during business hours, mon-fri.

Hopefully we can put a civilised and amicable resolution to this.

I am seeking an address to pickup the vehicle from (it was listed as local pickup), and the seller to make himself available at a time that reflects the 970km I will be travelling to collect the vehicle.

I'm looking for the seller to withdraw his extreme and irrational threat.

I have paid $4000 of the $5000 purchase price. on notifying that I was about to pay the remainder the seller attempted to extort another $1000 to supply documentation that belongs with the vehicle (CAMS logbook).

Seller agreed to withdraw his demand but is not making it possible to complete the transaction and pickup the vehicle in person.

Sellers last SMS was: "LOOK IF YOU DON'T DEPOSIT THE MONEY BY FRIDAY THE IS GOING BACK UP FOR AUCTION AND YOUR DEPOSIT WILL BE LOST THANKS"
